Millésime 2013

eRobert Parker.com

89-91/100 (août 2014)

This is another property much like Villemaurine, that has come of age and is one of the up-and-coming stars to look for from St. Emilion. The 2013 is a sleeper of the vintage, much like the 2009 and 2010. The final blend is 97% Merlot and 3% Cabernet Franc hit 13.5% natural alcohol. The wine was produced from 12 hl/ha yields, largely because of the vintage. Seventy percent of the harvest made it into the final wine. It shows good structure, an opaque purple color, and a sweet nose of blueberry and black raspberry fruit (a characteristic of this estate), licorice, graphite and spring flowers. It is medium-bodied, has good depth, overall ripeness and should drink nicely for 10-12+ years. WA

La Revue du Vin de France

15-15,5/20 (numéro de mai 2014)

Tri très haut de gamme tant dans l'intensité fruitée que dans la précision, la finesse des tanins du raisin et du boisé. De l'harmonie dans l'hyper sélection. Une rareté.

90/100 (février 2016)

Attractive aromas of tea leaf, blueberry, flower and blackberry. Full body, firm and chewy tannins and a pretty freshness of citrus rind and stone. Very well done for the vintage. Drink now or hold.

89-90 (mars 2014)

A 2013 with a good core of fruit and wet-earth character. Ripe tannins and a fresh finish. Very good length. May move up a notch in bottle.

My Bettane & Desseauve

16/20 pts (avril 2014)

Beaucoup d'allonge, bouche ample et belle dimension, tanin ferme, mais sans rudesse, allonge.

87-90/100 pts (avril 2014)

A juicy core of dark plum and blackberry fruit is lined with judicious ganache and licorice notes. A toasty edge wins out on the finish, but this is solid enough at the core.

WineEnthusiast-Roger Voss

92-94/100 pts (avril 2014)

Ripe and fruity, this is a generous wine, full of rich black fruit, firm tannins and dry wood-aging flavors. Balanced and integrate, it holds together well and should age well over the medium term.

14,75-15/20 (mai 2014)

Nez fruité. Bouche fruitée, tannique, mais enrobée, de corps et de longueur moyens.
